Preface

Dear Reader,

In many ways the poems you will read in this collection are gibberish nonsense! A rabble of words strung together to make vague sense with the hope that you will find some meaning out of the background dribble. Thinking positive though, I have tried my very best to piece together something thought provoking that I hope will also satisfy the urges of any literate OCD suffers. To tell the truth I often look through this work and rather than poems, I see mathematical problems to which I have found a particular solution for.

Originally, I was going to call this book 'poems not written by me' because many of them are anagrams or a selection of 'other people's words' arranged in such a way they have a new sense of direction.

It is certainly a wild adventure writing a poem where boundaries are in place and I often find there is no of knowing where it will take you until the very last letter is in place. It can certainly be challenging but in some ways having limitations helps me; to portray ones most untamed imagination through words, for me, would be an impossible challenge and I envy people who can write with such unrestricted brilliance and beauty.

I hope you enjoy my book.

Tom

PS) I am very fond of the game Scrabble.

N.Y.C. con

House is near,
lost in traffic layers ceased in gear
O, this dreaded rush.
Busses plod,
taxis go, alloys steer GGGGRRRRR Move.

Cut-out hero

The queen stares! Across checked land,
Religious service rechristened at her side

Castles, limbs of stone, advance soon shatter to ruled ruins

Sixteen hooves fight, clash, rider spirit fiery

Royalty rooting sacrifice, cop out & plot over coco

End tune

A fly gaped, size of me bewildering,
He smiled too,
insecticide immune

Wallop!

Um... gutted

The plane went Bang! pvff cLK

- : Mourn, is lost to pebbled sands or oceans deep unknown
- : No! Unhorse that pilot and may his piffle be dethron'd, judge me not as thine enemy,
for I fend hopes jaws of pity so my kings face doth awak'n our reap'r, aground.

The playful distractions of the mind

To swim or not to swim
Is that the question?
If it is I suppose the answer would be a 'yes' - So not to drown
Only an island insight now,
Not my idea of an ideal getaway
But still, it is rather peaceful.

Why is it this question that possesses my thoughts anyway?
Memories of a not so distant high school no doubt.
English with William,
How I miss your majestic free flowing prose now – ha, yeah right.

Come on! Focus

The answer is still 'yes' - so not to drown.

If I were an English Renaissance villager,
A mere peasant amongst nobles,
It is without question I'd be suspected of witchcraft one of these days.
Perhaps for my measly education providing me with, for the time period, extensive knowledge of science 'n that.
You'd have to atone that this becomes a very different question if on trial for Satanism.
They say a true witch would float, when immersed in a river or lake
But if your soul was pure, a true Christian, you'd sink yourself like a stone.
So would I swim? - They'd probably burn me at the stake if I did.

Butterfly! Now there's a crazy swimming stroke.
The last time I saw a guy doing butterfly
he accidentally hit a kid in the face.
Oh it was hilarious – the kid was fine of course, except for a minor teary eyed nose bleed.
He was a rather handsome chap come to think of it.

I made it to the shore.
Avoided being eaten by a shark, so that's good.
Survived the blur of watching shoals,
Constantly surfacing to pinch at all the fleshy parts, of gruesome, dishevelled bodies.
Once, they were simply remnants of the other crash victims minding their own business, bobbing the ocean ceiling without a care in the world.
They had no ambitions to become bloody fish food.

Mother Earth you can be a cruel parent.

I think I'll repress these memories.

Happy fat children

The sun, started a sunflower equivalent that's energy services always saturated in great colours, cooking naturally.
Potatoes ready for the harvest, great tasting, muddy. Farmers know best.
The individual potato a seed may be and we, the very fibre of seed.

Send us your best Sunday.
Walkers pack logo bag before them,
the sun rains a dry flavour,
as if the sun were dissatisfied worked not, weather cool and crisp.
The children with requirements of daily sugar snack wrappers and sold packaged fat, packets of oil, per flavour per multipack purchased from the department store.

"Crisps crisps crisps!"
Lower in fibre, high in oil salted fat.
"Not that flavour!" Sure, which ever!
Pack a daily bag, visit your daily place.
So this multipack... contains lots of salt,
but over our guidelines? No.

Is this it? Generations of adults, women, limited to enjoy nutritional food,
naturally good, ingredients of seed.
They cook calories with salt to make a sale, artificial vegetarians and coeliacs suitable for oils, salt who complains not about lower wheat.

Are your children fat? Tell us why this is.

And calories watch the seed of men,
people each and everyone together affected daily.
Exactly what must we experience to understand values?

Rectal squelch

A student struggles university.
Attending lectures, googles glossaries alien to sex.
A platter of education for the mind, life's fruit.
A nerved chin,
earplug nerd... Ninny

& I,
Rich, otiose, ogling TV, chromosome XY
a stud
Google xxx, milf, fanny Fcuk sometimes.
A Lead smoker

Should I read a course colouring maps... or psychology?

Eat crap, orange tarts lectures... never!
Why take classes?
first error, a learning ordeal Fail a class → Retake.

The church is my pub,
A rye in hand drug party.

If I were a tree

If I were a tree and the world was a forest, what would you be?

I'd be the two lovers that carve their names in your trunk
The morning dew that rests upon your leaves
The thunder and lightning, but only the fork lightning; I like that kind more.

A Hiker, and then I'd wee on you

A woodpecker

A bigger tree than you

A lumberjack

What kind of tree are you? And what kind of forest is this?

I'd be a rock on the ground, that'd be cool.

Dude, you're not a tree, go see a psychiatrist.

A little spotted skunk scurrying around the woodland floor

A tree hugger

I'd build a tree house in you and call it my home

A talking geranium

An insect stick – it's a stick that looks like an insect

I would say pecan tree... dunno why, I guess because I love pecans.

Seriously dude, a psychiatrist.

Are we talking about a tropical forest, like the Amazon?

Because I'd be the rain

so that every day at a certain time I could constantly hit you in the face for two hours, that'll teach you for writing 'p o e t r y'... pansy.

But if it's not a rainforest then maybe slime flux (it's a tree rotting bacteria, six years with me and you'll be dead buddy so watch out).

I'd like to be a rock please.

If you were a tree and I was a forest, what would the world be? A bit weird, that's what.

Halve thy sons

There's one letter k in the Lord's Prayer.

Would you believe it? (I would)

There's going to be no similes in this poem that's for sure.

Oh, I've found another k...

You probably wouldn't have figured,

if I hadn't said.

Vivid Avatars (at the cinema) roamed over father's three-d time.

Some envy their made-up sands,

and swan to engage wrongness (an ^{Iraq}afghan war?)
